When I think of the untold treasures that are hibernating, dangerously prone to fall into bits because of faulty storage.. I shudder to think of our indifference to what is a great national heritage. It is my honest belief that there is work in India for a thousand Bedars incessantly working at their jobs for a period of 50 years and some of my friends tell me that my estimate is conservative !

Let us hope that the publication of such catalogues will ispire the powers that be to a sustained effort at preserving our valuable manuscript collections in the country, which are the very basis of our history.

Foreword

Dr. Abid Raza Bedar has honoured and at the same time embarrassed me greatly by asking me to write a foreword to his catalogue of Arabic and Persian Manuscripts, which were found in the Saulat Library at Rampur, and no protestation on my part has succeeded in my arguing myself out of this responsibility ! In writing this foreword, I have an excuse derived from Confucius who is alleged to have said that if there was a law that only those who were competent to speak on a subject should be allowed to speak on it, there would be a great hush all over the world ! Fortunately, my stewardship of the National Library at Calcutta had familiarised me with the bibliographical problems involved in the editing of Persian and Arabic manuscripts and the excellent catalogues of the Buhar Library, known all over the world, educated me to standards of achievement in this respect.

Dr. Bedar's qualifications to carry out this highly responsible work of cataloguing Arabic and Persian manuscripts are well known. He has already edited and published the unique manuscript of Tafzihul Ghafilin which was written by Mirza Abu Talib Isfahani, recording the under-currents which led to the decline of Oudh. Scholars had given up hope of ever getting at the original of Dr. Hoey's English translation published in 1885 ! Professor Kabir in his foreword has hoped that Dr. Bedar would follow up this important work of his with a further research into the history of India in the late Eighteenth and early Nineteenth centuries. But research must have a bibliographic base and therefore Dr. Bedar has proceded on the right lines by establishing for future research, the personality of the manuscripts in a very thorough manner, indicating physical format, condition of the manuscript, the nature of the script and material, contextual peculiarities observable in the manuscript, the exact title of the work and the name of the author. He has also sorted out the manuscripts into subjects like sufism, ethics, theology, medicine, etc. Only those who actually do this work of descriptive cataloguing, so eloquently described by scholars of the stature of Mckerrow, will know the scholarship and patience demanded of this task ! I have discussed this catalogue with scholars in Arabic and Persian, so that I might learn a little more about it and all those whom I have talked to have great praise for it. The title and author index for both the Arabic and Persian parts make for easy reference.

I have met Dr. Bedar several times and talked to him and I am deeply impressed by the dedication and enthusiasm he has for such work. Only the other day, while writing to me, asking me to hasten my promise, he concludes his letter with the following paragraph :

"May I add another piece of information, not in any way connected with or relevant to above, but nevertheless a precious good news at least for me that in this city of modern libraries, Delhi, I have discovered a collection of several hundred manuscripts of Arabic, Persian, Turkish and Urdu, preserved in a Khanqah. And I have spent this whole week amid an unprecedented happiness searching out what treasure I can get out of these 'bundles'. I wanted to share this happiness of mine; nothing more."

This is typical of Dr. Bedar's temperament and it augurs well for scholarship !

These catalogues of manuscripts in India must have the highest priority to enable the writing of an authentic Indian history. When I think of the untold treasures that are hibernating, dangerously prone to fall into bits because of faulty storage, in the rich Jain Libraries, and in other manuscript hoards in the country, I shudder to think of our indifference to what is a great national heritage. Unesco's efforts at microfilming manuscripts in cooperation with the National Library of Calcutta has been a great break-through in this respect. But microfilming does not condition the manuscript for scholarly use and the further work of the compiling of catalogues has to be undertaken. It is my honest belief that there is work in India for a thousand Bedars incessantly working at their jobs for a period of 50 years and some of my friends tell me that my estimate is conservative !

Let us hope that the publication of such a catalogue will draw the attention of the authorities to their responsibilities in the matter. Without mentioning names for obvious reasons, may I relate how some efforts at conservation have misfired in this connection ? A very notable library in India with an unrivalled collection of manuscripts was helped out by the Government of India to air-condition certain rooms. Money was spent, the apparatus was installed and before long it broke down and to this day the condition is the unsatisfactory ! Let us hope that the publication of such catalogues will inspire the powers that be to a sustained effort at preserving our valuable manuscript collections in the country, which are the very basis of our history.

Introduction

This is the catalogue of manuscripts of one of the noblest enterprizes ever undertaken by the people of a princely State in India.

The young city of Rampur (founded in 1775) famous for its magnificent library of rare oriental manuscripts established and nourished by the State, (the erstwhile State library and now the Raza library), is no less proud of a people's enterprize, the Saulat Public Library, which is unique in its holdings of more than 25 thousand Urdu publications, most of them of rare value, in this part of the sub-continent.

This library also possesses several hundred oriental manuscripts in Arabic, Persian and Urdu. Since it did not specialize in manuscripts, it was rightly over-shadowed by the presence of the giant collection of the Raza; and few scholars are aware of its manuscript holdings. The Ministry of Education, Government of India, is to be thanked by those who find in the present catalogue anything useful and revealing; since without their generous Scheme, these manuscripts would have remained in oblivion for an indefinite period for the simple reason that this huge collection of Orientalia is being run on a total annual income of Rs. 2,500 only!

Founded in 1934 by a galaxy of social workers of Rampur, headed by Saulat Ali Khan, it was nourished by its scholar-librarian Syed Imtiyaz Husain under the learned guidance of its chairman Maulvi Ziya'ullah Khan. The able librarian was fortunate in securing the active support and collaboration of a select team of distinguished scholars of Rampur. Among them were Kalbe Ali Khan Fa'iq, Sahibzade Abdul Jalil Khan, Mumtaz Khan, Akbar Hasan Khan, Imtiyaz Ali Khan Arshi, Mohd. Jan Khan, Mohd. Ahmad Khan, Rashid Ahmad Khan, Ahsanullah Khan, Is'haqunnabi Khan, S. Faridduddin, Abid Ali Khan and S. Nizamuddin Hairat. Of those who captained it through the critical period of 1947 and after, S. Faridduddin alias Achchhe Miyan and the late Salamatullah Khan will always be remembered with gratitude. If I were to single out, I would rather prefer to say that but for the scholar-librarian Imtiyaz Saheb, the Library would not have acquired such a fine collection; but for Salamatullah Khan, it would not have survived the Merger; but for Achchhe Miyan it would not have remained intact, maintaining its high traditions of a non-partisan academy of higher learning and scholarly pursuits; and but for Saulat Ali Khan's generous donation of his valuable personal library, it would not have come into existence. And, of course, but for the patron of knowledge, H. H. S. Raza Ali Khan Bahadur, the late Nawab of Rampur, who rushed to recognise its value and gave it his unlimited and untiring sympathy and support, this institution of a princely State would not have advanced a single step forward.

Saulat library was one of the noblest ventures of the people of Rampur in their entire history of about one hundred and fifty years. It remained a fine source of inspiration for other more ambitious and great ventures of wider implications. It was also the radiating centre for the spread of knowledge until it was implicitly declared almost a dead collection. It lived an enviable life for about fourteen years; and it is slowly passing away during the last twenty years. The peoples and their spirit is gone; the State is busy with politics; and the Knowledge waits for a Messiah.

As for its collection, apart from its manuscripts, the Library is proud of an uptodate collection of complete files of several national newspapers, Hindustan Times, Statesman, National herald, Qawmi Awaz, Al-Jami'at and Tej among them, together with the files of many another important newspaper that flourished before '47. It possesses a dozen files of the famous journal Al-Hilal of Maulana Abul Kalam Azad and the Comrade of Maulana Muhammad Ali. It has got the sole surviving copy of the first edition of Urdu diwan of Mirza Ghalib. Few libraries can match its fine collection of learned Urdu periodicals, not to say anything for its huge Urdu collection, in general.

The structure and general pattern of this Catalogue was worked out by the Ministry of Education, Govt. of India, and we were to follow it without the slightest change. Column 1 represents the Serial Number as also the Class of knowledge to which the manuscript belongs. Incidentally, since it is almost a dead collection, the Serial Numbers have been declared as the Call Numbers of the respective manuscripts. Column 2 gives the Accession Number of the library which was also the old call number. Column 3 is for the Title; and an asterisk (*) at the end of the title means that it is more important than others in some respect or the other. Column 4 gives the name of the Author, and 5 that of the Commentator, if any. Column 6 is meant for the material on which the MS. is written, which is invariably Paper (P). Column 7 is for the Script, which was obviously Arabic in each case; hence, in order to utilise it to a certain extent, the types of this script were singled out in this column. Column 8 is for the Size (S) of the book, in centimetres, wherein the order is, first, of the blank page and, next, of the written page; and then the number of folios (F) and everage number of lines per page (L) have been added. Column 9 is for describing whether the manuscript is Complete (C) or Incomplete (Inc.); and if incomplete, upto what extent, if it is possible to discover. Column 10 is for the general condition of the book, as also for the "Age", wherein we have given the exact date of transcription, wherever it was available; and if not, the Hijri century. Last column, 11, is for any other important information about the manuscript; and here we have utilised it to give the name of the scribe as well, which is quite an important item in the description of a manuscript, as also the place where it was copied. If the manuscript is important, we have also given in this column a short description of its contents, or its beginning (Beg.) and colophon.

Transliteration Scheme

The transliteration scheme followed in this catalogue is as follows;

a, o, u	ā	b	p	t	ṣ	j
ا	آ	ب	پ	ت	ث	ج
ch	ḥ	kh	d	z	r	ż
چ	ح	خ	د	ذ	ر	ز
ẓ	s	sh	ṣ	ḍ	ṭ	ẓ
ژ	س	ش	ص	ض	ط	ظ
'a 'i 'u	ġ	f	q	k	g	l
ع	غ	ف	ق	ك	گ	ل
m	n	W,o,u (if consonant or short vowel); ū (if a long vowel)
م	ن		و
h	'a 'i ,u	ī	ai
ہ	ء	ی	ے

We have placed an apostrophe between such alphabets as occuring before 'h' and which might have been misread, for example, Z'H for ZH, or R'H for RH which otherwise might have been taken for ژ and ز or ژہ and زہ respectively.

Classification

Since the number of books was scanty in most of the sections, we have merged some of the independent classes into their major or mother disciplines. Such for examples are: prosody, merged in Grammar, and history of Iran, biography and travel annexed to the history of India and made a part of the major discipline History. Some of the manuscripts, which were not available at the proper time, were inserted under Miscellaneous group, although they had a clear class; some other classes, which were represented by one or two manuscripts, were also added under miscellaneous.

Important books were marked with an asterisk (*), and were intended to be described in detail, at the end of the Text, to form the Appendix. But since the catalogue is already too late, it was decided to abondon this idea and to give the necessary description alongwith the text, in column 11.

Indices

Besides the author and title indices of Persian and Arabic manuscripts in the language of the Catalogue, a seperate index, one each for Arabic and Persian, is added in the language of the book. This is devised to make the use of the Catalogue wider and more convenient. The Serial Numbers against these language-indices are given in Arabic numerals as they are used in the text, so that it might be easier to pick up the right book. Likewise in the English portion of the indices the numerals shown against the entries are the Serial numbers which are also the Call Numbers of these manuscripts.

Addenda & Corrigenda

And lastly, my regrets for an unprecedented long corrigenda, which is of course not meaningful to any casual reader but nevertheless necessary for correct textual reading by the specialist.

Due to certain unavoidable circumstances, the editor had to depend on going through one proof only. Litho is bad enough for correct printing, but type is worse if one has to depend simply on one proof.

There are four types of corrections (i) to delete; (ii) to delete-and-add or simply to add; and (iii) entirely new insertions serialised with an added symbol "A" e, g. 400 (A); these last ones should be treated as a full-fledged part of the text, meant to be read after the original serial number e.g. 400(A) after 400.

P.	Nasta'līq.	S. $19\frac{1}{2} \times 12$; $15 \times 7\frac{1}{2}$. F. 79; L. 15.	C.	Slightly worm-eaten. 11th century.	Scribe : 'Abdurraḥmān—Lam'āt is the famous work of 'Irāqī. Its Sharḥ was written by Sh. Yār 'Alī. The present Sharḥ is the commentary on that Sharḥ. 'Irāqī's Lam'āt is itself on the 2nd Faṣṣ of Fuṣuṣ by Ibn-i-'Arabī. On the first page of the present ms. there are many seals. At one place it reads, "4th year" which means the year of Julūs, perhaps of Aurangzeb; at another place we find a phrase which reads; "Arḍ dīda shud", dated 19th year; there is a seal of some " 'Abdurraḥmān... 'Ālamgīr. The blank space may be for the word "Fidwī"; this is actually blankened by the eating of the worm. At one place there is a seal bearing the date ...25 H." the first two digits of the four-digit place are not legible; it may be 1125, or even 1025, as at another place there is a seal bearing the date 1069 H. Notes on the last page are also important.

Urdu Manuscripts of Saulat Public Library

The Scheme of the Govt of India does not cover modern Indian languages. Hence we had to adopt a more simple and less spacious pattern of description for Mss. in Urdu and other languages. The order of Description is as follows:—Sl. No. (which is also the Call No.); Author (in inverted Index-style of arrangement); Title; Age & peculiarities if any; Scribe; and Folios. The arrangement is by authors in strict alphabetical order of Urdu characters i.e. الف (A), ب (B), ت (T), ث (Ṣ), ج (J) down to ی (Y).
